

ICO consultation on the draft right of access guidance

The right of access (known as subject access) is a fundamental right of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). It allows individuals to find out what personal data is held about them and to obtain a copy of that data. Following on from our initial GDPR guidance on this right (published in April 2018), the ICO has now drafted more detailed guidance which explains in greater detail the rights that individuals have to access their personal data and the obligations on controllers. The draft guidance also explores the special rules involving certain categories of personal data, how to deal with requests involving the personal data of others, and the exemptions that are most likely to apply in practice when handling a request.

We are running a consultation on the draft guidance to gather the views of stakeholders and the public. These views will inform the published version of the guidance by helping us to understand the areas where organisations are seeking further clarity, in particular taking into account their experiences in dealing with subject access requests since May 2018.

If you would like further information about the consultation, please email SARguidance@ico.org.uk.

Please send us your response by 17:00 on Wednesday 12 February 2020.

Q8 Please provide any further comments or suggestions you may have about the draft guidance.

You need to change the clock starting guidance. The old guidance said that whilst we were clarifying a request the clock was stopped. Now you are saying that it doesn't. What are we to do if the requester takes weeks or months to reply – have we failed to answer the SAR? If the requester never answers what do we do? What if we do not understand their request – how can we fulfil it properly?

This guidance is manifestly unfair on both the data controller and also the requester who may get reams of information they are not interested in. It is also disobeying GDPR Article 5c)
